BROOKLYN NAVY YARD.

POLITICS DISREGARDED IN SELECTING THE FOREMEN.

Clocks, Chronometers, Compasses and the Civil Service Rules—A Bad Site for the Observatory on the Potomac—National News—Washington Notes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Early in July Secretary Whitney issued an order directing that competitive examinations should be held at the larger navy yards to fill the positions of foremen of the several branches of the service. The result of this examination at the Brooklyn navy yard was determined by Secretary Whitney and Commodore Harney, chief of yard and docks, who is also acting secretary during the absence of Mr. Whitney. There were 100 applicants for the fourteen different positions, and every man appointed was the first name recommended by the examining board, without reference to politics. The appointments were made out at the navy department and will be mailed to the commandant at Brooklyn. As usual at such examinations every bit of personal history relating to the applicants was filed with the board of examiners. Hence the politics of the successful applicants can be given, which shows that eight are Democrats, four Republicans, and the politics of two are unknown. The list follows:

James R. McGee, master shipwright, democrat; George McMullen, ship joiner, democrat; George Brown, plumber and coppersmith, democrat; Alfred J. Sweeney, ship-smith, republican; Titus E. Dodge, master sparmaker, republican; James Furlong, master blockmaker, politics unknown; John McWade, master moulder, democrat; John O'Rourke, master boiler maker, democrat; Edward Atwell, master rigger, democrat; George Slattery, master sailmaker, republican (he has been twenty-five years in the yard); Lewis Rhodes, master calker, democrat; John Anderson, foreman machinist, republican (he has been twenty years in the yard); Samuel W. Tompkins, master ship builder, democrat; and Thomas A.
Craig, foreman painter, politics unknown.

The navy department has informed the American makers of chronometers that new chronometers will be purchased this fall, and that all dealers wishing to compete must deposit their specimens at the navy department on or before January 1st, 1886, when the six months' test will begin. It is expected that over forty of the best makes, with all the improvements now demanded, will be entered into competition. This is something novel and interesting in the history of the naval observatory after its century of usefulness. The navy department is making chronometers a scientific civil service examination will probably be made in the near future, and the navy administration is assuming more and more that it is performing.

It is several times a fact which has excited the greatest interest among the old firms who have been furnishing the navy with chronometers for nearly fifty years on an entirely different basis, which is that the navy department has undertaken to compete with the Zondé and Nages, whose names are familiar to every one in the navy. The firm furnishing the largest number of the accepted clocks under this competitive system will be entitled to a reputation in their line greater than has ever before been obtained in this country. The plan by which the successful ones are to be selected, is the outgrowth of experience made at the observatory during the past two years. The importance of a good chronometer to the navy and nautical service is too well known to call for a word of explanation.

Two years ago congress made an appropriation for building at the observatory what is called a temperature room for testing chronometers. Before that the instruments for accurately measuring time were merely round watches, and as they run, the appointment kept at nearly even temperature the year round. The improvement provided for enabled the skilled employees at the observatory to give the chronometer put on a naval vessel its temperature curve, the observations recording variations from former to ninety degrees through the summer and winter months of accurate watching. The navigator who daily would these clocks on aliphoid and in record of the thermometer eter, and by the aid of the temperature curve determined each day what would be the mean gain or loss to each instrument even as close as one-thirtieth of a second.

Those who know the value of such an important aid in sailing the great steamships will appreciate this additional service in making calculation for the course of the ship. When the temperature curve became a part of the record of each tested chronometer, the manufacturers said they could improve them so as to make the records of temperature unnecessary, and all the makers have been ever since trying to get the balance wheel, by auxiliaries and aids to compensate for changes of temperature. To some extent this has been done, but the improvement has introduced other alterations, which are so far objectionable in making the clocks unreliable in other respects.
These, the manufacturers say, can be entirely overcome, and thus the need of the temperature curve test may be avoided. The test is a ninety degree test, but the improvement has introduced other alterations,
which are so far objectionable in making
the clocks unreliable in other respects.

which are so far objectionable in making
the clocks unreliable in other respects.

Congress, at its last session, appropriated $7,000 for the erection of a building on the grounds of the naval observatory in which to test compasses used by naval vessels. The building now in process of construction is a fine building, and it is the liquid compass, made by a Boston firm, the needle floating in alcohol. The improved magnetic compass tion of the needle has also made it equally susceptible to other influences, and the question now is what can be done to improve the standard of accuracy. The object of the new buildings now going up west of the observatory is to provide a place where every compass used on naval vessels can be tested with every refinement known to science to ascertain its reliability. With these facilities and means it is intended to raise the standard higher than ever before.

"When the liquid compass was first introduced it was not long before the sailors discovered that the watery looking substance was alcohol. For lack of something better to intoxicate, the compass liquid was freely taken from the spare compass kept in the ship's storeroom. Corrosive sublimate is now mixed with the liquid, and such compass bears the legend, 'This liquid contains poison.' The fluctuations of the earth's magnetism will also be carefully observed with the latest improved instruments invented for that purpose. The additional room now provided will take from the navy department much of the material entering in the bureau of navigation and transfer it to its proper place in the compass testing bureau.

Tutle's comet, recently seen at Nice France, has not been seen at the observatory here. One of the professors, Mr. Frisby, went some ten miles to discover it, but the weather was hazy and prevented continued observation. The fact is that the locality of the observatory is becoming more and more unfavorable every year. During last night, and of this number but very few were such as astronomically considered except where an observatory is fixed. The mist from the Potomac is constantly clouding the sky or making the atmosphere hazy.

The filling up of the Potomac state will only remove one-half of the other cause of complaint, the never ending mists. The Virginia side will continue before. The prevailing wind is from the southwest at this season, which is the worst of the year, and every night the observatory is filled with the clammy miasma swept there from the south bank of the Potomac. The meteorological and climate conditions of the new site on Grosvenor's island, purchased in 1880, are unexceptionable. The only question is when will congress appropriate a sum sufficient for building the new observatory?

Paymaster Tuttle, who discovered the cause of the mists, is not in the city now.
He is living in retirement near Washington, but naturally takes a lively interest in the return of the celestial visitor named in his honor.

How Gen. Grant Stopped the Project of Prosecuting Ex-Confederates For Treason.

[Louisville Commercial.] The remarks of Major William J. Davis at the Grant memorial meeting Saturday night, in relation to an incident in Gen. Grant's career of such high importance that it should be generally known, and we have, therefore, obtained from Major Davis a complete report of what he said, as follows:

A Confederate officer named Bradley Johnson, belonging to the army of Northern Virginia, was surrendered by Gen. Lee at Appomattox. Receiving his parole, he went to his home at Baltimore and entered upon his controversy with Gen. Grant, complaining of his treatment, and inciting his parole. Gen. Grant appeared before President Johnson and his Cabinet and demanded that the parole of the Confederate soldiers surrendered at Appomattox should be respected. It is stated by a member of this Cabinet, now a distinguished citizen of Louisville, that Gen. Grant, on this occasion made a wonderfully clear, precise and vigorous argument. He held that the President, commanding the army of the people of the United States he was their representative; he had accepted the surrender of Lee's army in good faith, and that he was bound to honor the parole of the soldiers in his army, the honor of the people and of the Government was pledged. President Johnson concurred in this opinion. Warmed by the opposition to his soldierly, honest construction of the convention between himself and Lee, he said with firmness and dignity: "I have given guarantees of safety and protection, and I have told you, and they shall be maintained. For my self, rather than these assurances should fail, I will be drawn and quartered." He went out, leaving the President and his War Secretary overmastered by his courage. And ever afterward Gen. Grant stood between the distracted South, on the one hand, and on the other, the invincible Stanton and those feeble spirits whose hearts fed on revenge and whose patriotism assumed to need a sacrifice of blood to nourish it.

Jimmy Roseman's Brother. NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Jimmy Roseman, centre fielder of the Metropolitan baseball club, died in Third avenue near One Hundred and Tenth street, at 8 o'clock, very much excited. He was a son or two in a discordant voice, much to the amusement of those present, and then picked up a little dog which was lying at his feet and threw it to the floor with great force. Jack Lynch, pitcher for the same club and owner of the dog, remonstrated and finally seized Roseman by the throat. A riot of some kind followed and the men sprang on the floor. Lynch appeared. The crowd increased and then Roseman made a speech. "No man," he said, "can choke Jimmy Roseman, the centre fielder of the Metropolitan baseball club. No man ever did choke him and no man might, could, would or should choke him—end lives." Lynch tried to pacify him. Roseman jumped up and down, gesticulated wildly, thumped in the chest a little boy who came in for a pint of beer and nearly knocked him down, pulled his coat half off and pulled it on again and tipped over a table and several chairs. The crowd scattered. Barring the furniture, nothing was injured but the dog.

A Mexican Decree. CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 15.—The cabinet, after a protracted discussion, has decided on the nature of the reply to be made to the representatives of the railway companies on the question of whether the railways were to be exempted from the operation of the decree of June 22. The government has decided that no exception shall be made in favor of the railroads, and that the law of June 22 shall be enforced to the letter. Subsidies will not be paid, and not one cent of the custom's revenue will be appropriated to the railroads. The government must maintain that it owes the railroads nothing except the small amount of subsidy which would have accrued to them since the publication of the decree, and this amount, and that falling due in future months will be included in the government's floating debt.

ON BOARD THE GALLIA.

A NUMBSKULL DUDE THE VICTIM OF PRACTICAL JOKES.

He is Also Exceedingly Fat and Remarkably Dull—Putting All Sorts of Jokes, Winning His Flush Cash—Chairs Overboard—Unusual Capers.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—On the last trip of the Cunard steamer Gallia there was unusual hilarity among certain of the cabin passengers. A young English nobleman who came to this country in company with a friend for the purpose of spending some of his immense income, which is said to amount to $800,000 per annum, was made the victim of a number of practical jokes. He is said to be exceedingly fat and remarkably dull. When the vessel left Liverpool the game commenced by letting on the run of the ship during the preceding twenty-four hours, and the Englishman lost.

Principal among the heavy betters was a California colonel who offered the most tremendous odds and by a singular coincidence always won. The party then amused themselves by putting all sorts of jokes on him and caused him to drink wine, sing songs and dance for their amusement. Then, it is alleged, their conduct grew riotous, so much so that Capt. Murphy was appealed to and asked to have the racket stopped. Among other little amusements it was arranged three or four days before the ship reached port that all the steamer chairs should be thrown overboard.

A gentleman was informed and reported the fact, when a watch was put over the chairs, and they were saved. It is said that the fun was carried to such a length that one of the cabin passengers, who was intoxicated, was stripped of his clothing and left lying in the main saloon. It is generally the case that fun-loving passengers join together in playing harmless tricks on each other during a passage; they also bet on all sorts of things, but it is seldom much license is indulged in as was the case on board the Gallia.

A Bismarck Pair.

JOLIET, Ill., Aug. 15.—Mary Daniels, of Terre Haute, a white woman, and Chas. Stewart, a negro sailing from the same city, were released from the Joliet prison, after serving a year each, for bigamy. Mary eloped from Terre Haute, leaving a white husband, and Stewart left a colored wife. The two went to Marseilles, Ill., and were married, but were followed up from Indiana by Stewart's dusky better half, who had them arrested and convicted. A peculiarity about the Daniels woman is that when she reached the prison her face and hands had been colored by some kind of a stain that gave her the appearance of a bright colored mulatto woman. A year's sojourn behind the bars has bleached her skin to its natural color, so that when she was called up for discharge the prison officials were astonished to see that instead of being a mulatto Mary Daniels had blue eyes and a fair skin with rosy cheeks, and instead of kinky hair, her hair had been adorned with locks of light brown color. Stewart had been released several hours ahead of the woman, but instead of leaving town he hung about the prison awaiting her release. She remained at the prison until the St. Louis train arrived, when she got aboard, giving her colored lover the slip.

Not Down on the Hills.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 15.—At the Spanish Fort opera house during the performance of the St. Quentin Opera company of the "Chimes of Normandy" there was a little episode introduced, which caused no little excitement among the audience. In order to hurry this piece one scene was cut out of it, in which the tenor, Harry Malten, had to sing. Malten was very indignant over the supposed slight, and threatened the uttermost enmity in consequence against the prima donna, Miss Lizzie St. Quentin, who he suspected had the play cut. In the next scene, while Miss Quentin was singing, Malten, to the surprise of everybody, walked on the stage with a small crowd in his hands and without saying a word, in the presence of an indignant audience, struck her several times across the shoulders. Miss Quentin ran behind the scenes, where Malten hit her several additional blows, until finally some one caught him. The only excuse offered for the outrage was that Malten was under the influence of liquor. Miss Quentin sang her part out, but amid tears and hysterics.

General Denver Talks.

WILMINGTON, O., Aug. 15.—Gen. James W. Denver in an interview says: "The idea of running a Democratic administration with Republican officials is a new one to me. I like the clean sweep plan, such as Internal Revenue Collector Bishop put in force in Cincinnati. Here, for instance, in Wilmington, is J. A. Quinby, a special pension examiner, located at Jeffersonville, Ind., a republican and a partisan. I hold that the civil service law is not only undemocratic, but unconstitutional. The president has the right to appoint and the constitution contemplates that he shall be responsible for his administration. This law takes the responsibility from him. By clearing republicans out of office Cleveland could insure the success of the democrats in Ohio this fall and he ought to do it at once."

Nondiscriminatory.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 15.—There is a widespread belief in voodooism among the negroes of Atlanta. Hundreds of colored persons are held under threats by colored doctors who vow terrible punishments against their victims if they fail to come up with their regular contributions. A. Golden, a well-to-do negro of this city, who was under the influence of one of these wretches, displayed him. The conjurer turned from Golden, and shaking his finger at him, said: "For this your entrails shall burn, and burn and burn." The next day Golden felt what he imagined fire to be burning within him. He was taken to bed, and his case baffled the skill of the doctors, who say that he will surely die. The other negroes gather at his house nightly and make the air mournful with their cries.
